Director, Investigations 1
Australian Trade Remedies Commission
GPO Box 1632
Melbourne VIC 3001

Dear Director

I am writing on behalf of Viridian Glass, Australia's largest processor of architectural glass and a major supplier to the Australian aluminium window and door industry.

Viridian Glass supports the preliminary findings set out in Statement of Essential Facts No. 691. In particular, we support the Commissioner's findings. These findings are consistent with our experience as an important upstream supplier to Australian window and door manufacturers.

The strength of Australian window and door manufacturing directly affects demand for Australian-processed glass. It also affects our ability to sustain employment, utilise our processing capacity, invest in Australian plant and technology, and maintain a resilient domestic supply network.

The injury caused by imported finished and partially fabricated windows and doors does not stop at the factory gate of the Australian window manufacturer. When an imported finished window displaces a window that would otherwise have been manufactured in Australia, it also displaces demand for locally processed glass, aluminium, hardware, transport, machinery, testing, technical services and other supporting products and services.

The Commission's findings are therefore important not only to Australian aluminium window and door fabricators, but also to the broader domestic manufacturing ecosystem that depends upon them. A sustainable base of Australian fabricators provides the scale necessary to maintain local supply chains, skilled employment, technical expertise, product development and continued investment in processing capability. Effective trade-remedy measures do not prevent legitimate import competition. They address unfair pricing and subsidisation so that competition can occur on a fair and sustainable basis.

For these reasons, Viridian Glass supports the Commission's preliminary findings and the implementation of effective and durable measures addressing the dumping, subsidisation and material injury identified in SEF 691. We encourage the Commission to ensure that its final recommendation provides a meaningful response to the conduct and injury established through the investigation. Measures that are insufficient to address the identified injury would leave Australian window and door manufacturers, glass processors and the broader domestic supply chain exposed to a continuation of the conditions documented in the SEF.

Confidential Commercial Information Provided to the Commission

The information provided by Viridian Glass demonstrates that the effects of dumped and subsidised imports are transmitted throughout Australia's window, door and glass-manufacturing supply chain.

A viable Australian window and door sector is essential to sustaining domestic demand for processed glass, maintaining skilled employment, supporting investment in local processing capacity and preserving Australia's broader manufacturing capability.

Viridian Glass therefore supports the findings in SEF 691 and urges the Commission to recommend effective final measures that fully address the dumping, subsidisation and material injury identified through the investigation.

Viridian Glass remains available to assist the Commission and would welcome the opportunity to provide further evidence under appropriate confidentiality arrangements.

Yours sincerely

Dean Haritos
